

We'd like you to meet

William C. Cain
DDS, MD

Dr. Cain's journey to become an oral surgeon has been an interesting one. He served in the U.S. Marines, gained an MS degree in microbiology and he plays a pretty fair round of golf. His research in microbiology gives him a deep understanding of the role that chemistry, pathogens and oral hygiene play in the overall health of patients. His time in the Marines gives him focus and perspective. Dr. Cain joined Austin Oral Surgery in 2007 after completing a General Surgery Residency at Baylor College of Dentistry. He brings to the practice expertise in implants, bone grafting and joint replacement, and lectures both locally and nationally on these topics. And his golf game? We think it keeps him humble. Dr. Cain practices in our Georgetown and Temple locations.
